

Amy Nordrum is an executive editor at MIT Technology Review, where she leads coverage of emerging technologies and innovation. Based in Boston, she oversees the publication's ...

Amy Nordrum is the executive editor of operations at MIT Technology Review. She joined the staff as a commissioning editor in July 2020. Former NASA astronaut Drew Feustel now advises the...

Amy previously worked as news manager for IEEE Spectrum. For six years, she was also a regular contributor to the popular radio show Science Friday. She recently completed her MBA with a focus ...

My career mission is to build profitable newsrooms that empower journalists to do their best work. I'm executive editor of operations at MIT Technology Review, where I support an incredible team...

Earlier in her career, Amy was a Science Journalist at IBT Media from January 2015 to February 2016, and a Communications Coordinator for the Downtown Association of Fairbanks from February 2011 ...

Amy Nordrum is an executive editor at MIT Technology Review based in Boston, Massachusetts. She oversees the publication's annual lists of 10 Breakthrough Technologies, ...

Learn about the role of Amy Nordrum, Executive Editor, Operations at MIT Technology Review. Full bio on The Official Board.

In this episode, I sit down with Amy Nordrum, Executive Editor at MIT Technology Review and one of the sharpest minds working at the intersection of journalism, technology, and leadership.

Amy Nordrum is an executive editor at MIT Technology Review based in Boston, MA. She oversees the publication's annual lists of 10 Breakthrough Technologies, 35 Innovators Under 35, and 15 Climate ...

Amy Nordrum is a science writer who has published in Scientific American, Popular Mechanics, The Atlantic, InsideClimate News, Psychology Today, Men's Journal, and American ...

Web: <https://thehibiscuscoast.co.za>